This yearbook may contain images, language, or other content that could be offensive to modern users. The content may be disturbing and offensive, but should be viewed within the context of that period. The material is being presented as part of a historical record and in no way reflects the values of Missouri Western State University.

Foreword

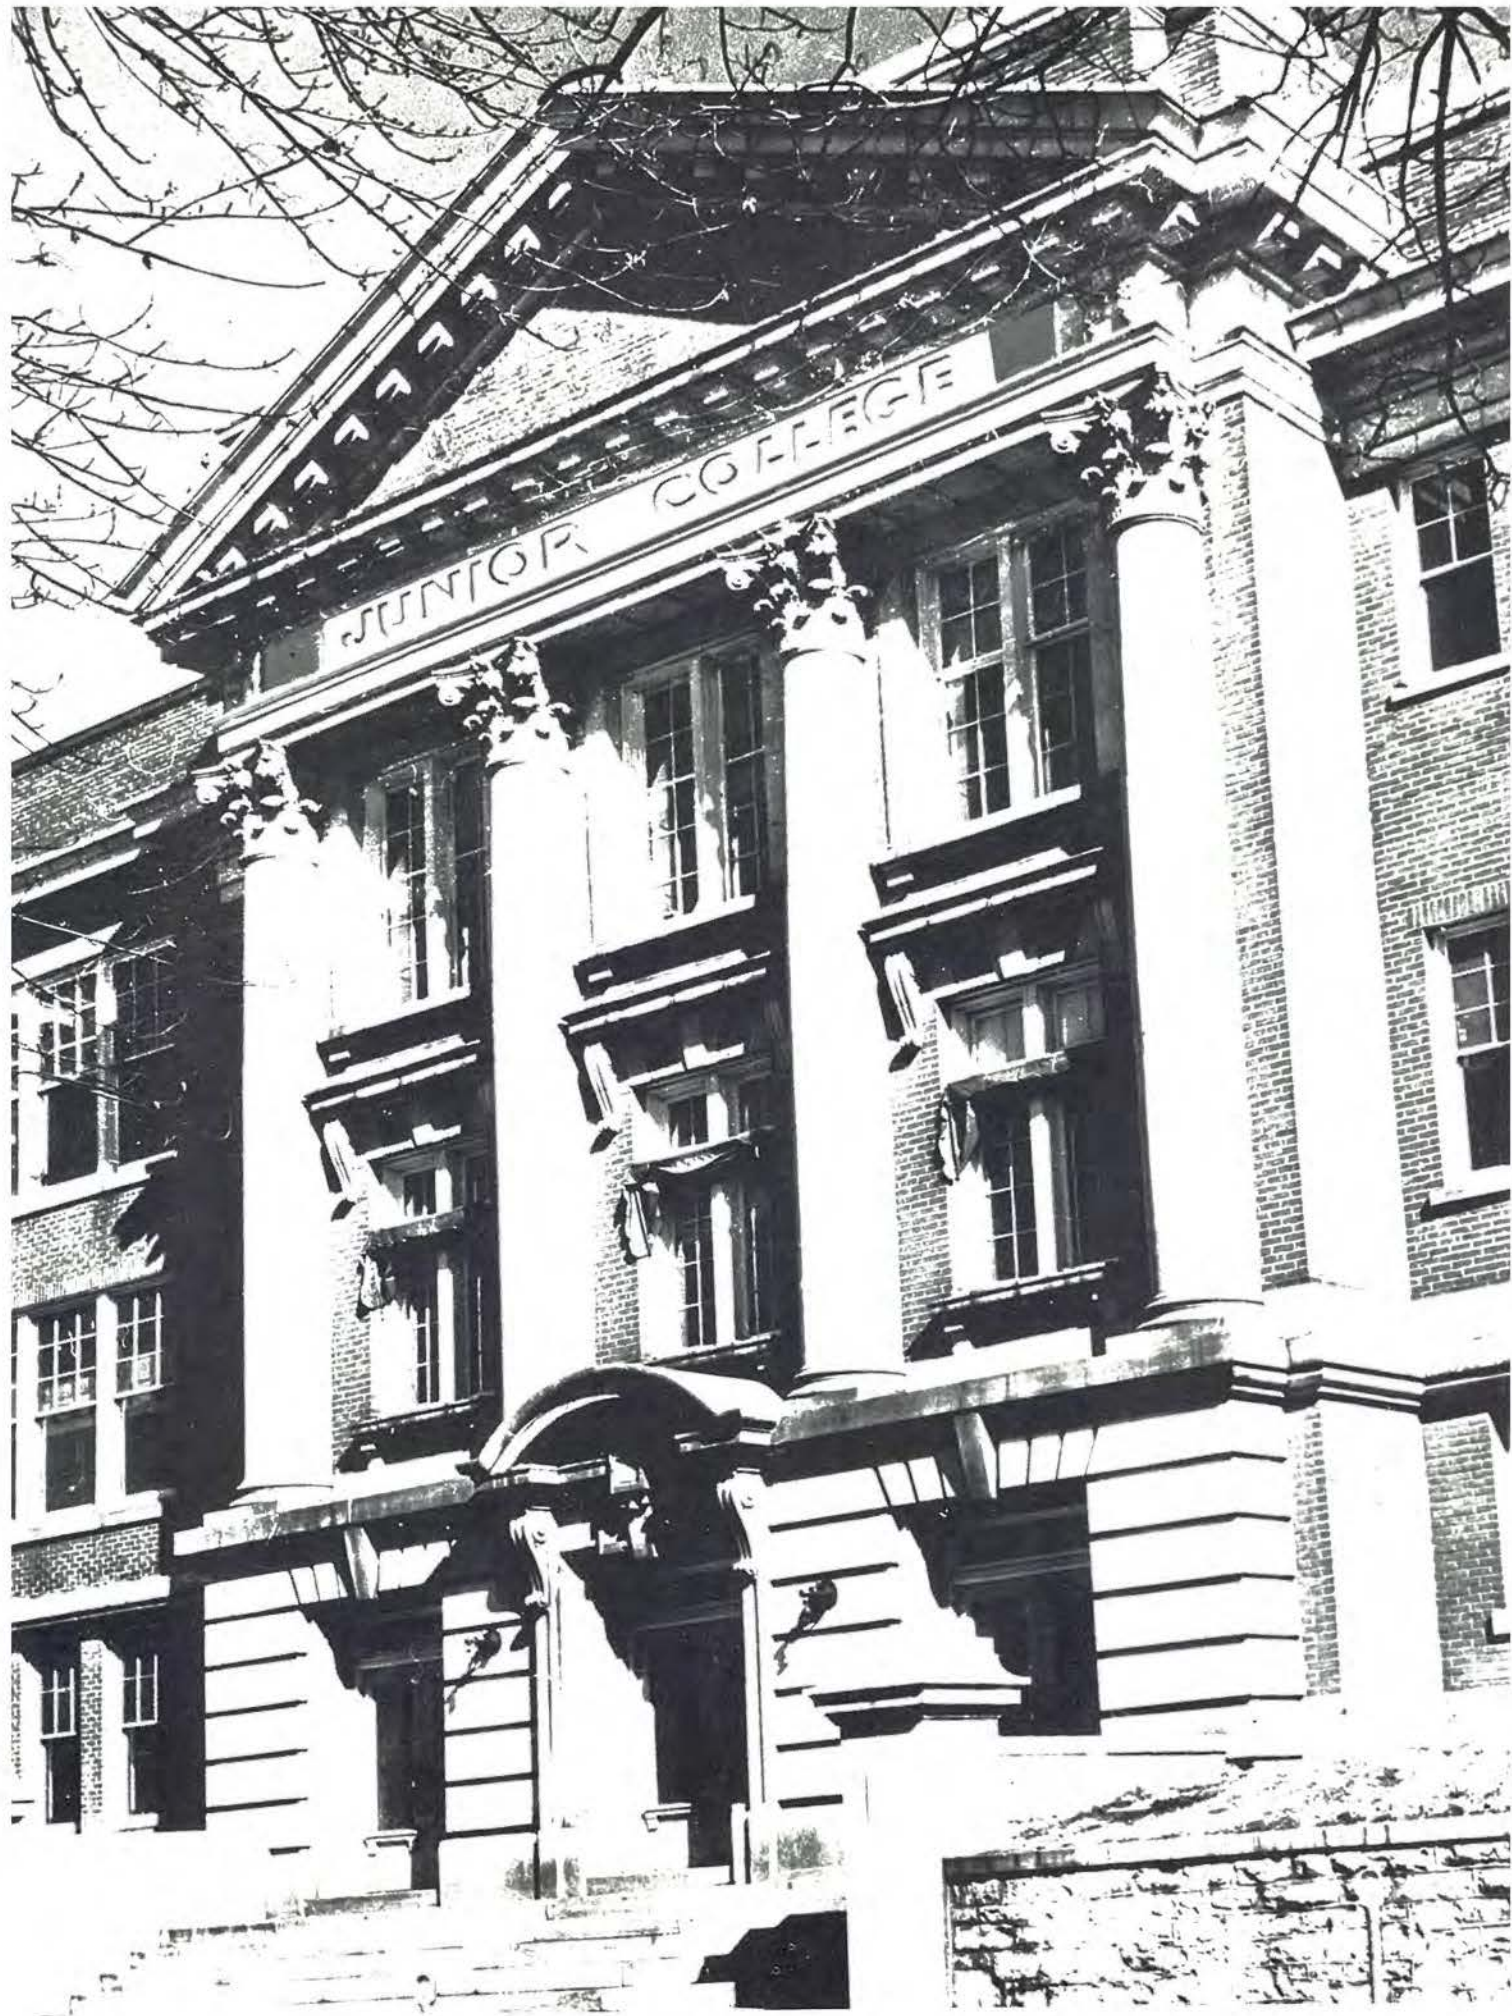

This yearbook was compiled to record the events during the 1963-64 school year at Saint Joseph Junior College. The staff has tried to present these events in a way that will bring back fond memories to those who were a part of them.

We hope to have created a book that will live to tell its story to all that read it in the future.

Fellow Students:

Do not be surprised at the salutation. One does not stop studying and learning at the end of one year or even four years of college. In fact, the chief objective of college is to prepare an individual for continuous learning. The techniques of independent study are developed during the years in college or university. When formal education ends, the individual must continue to learn, to think, and to reason on his own.

From a practical point of view the college graduate has more job opportunities at higher pay and with more security than the non-graduate. In most professions the demand exceeds the supply from five to twenty times. When the average worker seeks employment, he finds many others applying for the same job; the college graduate, on the other hand, may find that he has many offers of employment. This demand for more and more education will increase as our society grows more complex.

You, as students, are to be commended for the start you have made here at Junior College toward the development of your talents, the cultivation of your minds, and the pursuit of knowledge. I hope that you continue your education and that you successfully reach your goal.

Sincerely,

E. C. Little, Dean

ENGLISH

English is one of the essentials of an educated citizen. The Junior College student strives to master the ability to be precise, definite and complete in his uses of words. Some steps toward this goal are: English composition, masterpieces, English literature and advanced composition.

MATHEMATICS

The growing importance of mathematics can be seen more and more every day. With a better knowledge of algebra, trigonometry, analytics, and calculus the world becomes less puzzling to the student. The unknown becomes known with the understanding of why and how it can be. The mathematics department serves as the basis of all things.

Mathematics

The hypocycloid and semicubical parabola are familiar terms to Miss Watkins and her calculus students.

Mr. Marion's engineering students use the French curve and "T" square to draw blueprints.

SCIENCE

Quartz, Asteroidea, Ulmus, erosion ulna, and spirillum are familiar terms to the students of physics, chemistry, geology, zoology, botany, conservation and physiology. These courses are the science courses offered to the Junior College student to expand his knowledge and understanding of the world and its inhabitants. The science courses give the liberal arts student a well rounded education and the science major a sound foundation for more advanced work in his field.

The "Scientific Method" is often applied in lab class.

Tom Jackson, a future chemist.

CHARLOTTE FORNARY,
M.A. New York University

Mrs. Fornary listens and gives individual help in lab.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

Foreign languages widen the student's outlook on peoples of the world. Language courses incorporate the study of mechanics and pronunciation. The student learns that each language has its own unique forms of expression which he must master in order to speak and write the languages correctly. Skill in speaking, writing and reading Spanish and German are offered the Junior College Student.

DORTHY MOORE, A.M.
University of Kansas City

Mrs. Moore listens to dialogue given by three students.

JULIUS AASEN, JR., M.A.
University of Missouri

Fay Hall poses for drawing class while they sketch the "living model".

FINE ARTS

Over all the earth, man utilizes some form of aesthetic expression. The Junior College student is no exception; he expresses his ideas and thoughts of beauty and his emotions toward it through art and music. Drawing, painting, playing instruments, and singing are the methods he uses to convey messages to the senses of others. His tools are imagination and skill. He studies the works of the masters to gain knowledge and appreciation of their techniques of expression and of beauty itself.

SOCIAL SCIENCE

The social sciences delve into the problems of society which arise from conflicting mores, values, and concepts within a community and the solutions of them. The student studies history, psychology, economics, political, science, sociology, and social sciences I and II to acquire a background of knowledge for better understanding to equip him to live in society.

Activities

From this candid shot, we find that studies are often mixed with playing cards.

Sabra Dunlap, Doug Hamilton, Danny Miller and Don Carro (with his back to the camera) find bridge a very challenging card game.

People often meet face to face in the Gro doors. Here, Becky Miller startled Sa Harvey into dropping a book.

J. C.'s Grotto

Roger Dyer, Roger Adler and Bob Briggs confuse Mrs. Powell with several orders.

Steve Kerner, Kathy Syata, Barbara Anderson and Larry Thomas stop dancing to catch their breath.

The Ice Breaker

Christina Banks and Susan Schmidt sing their popular folk songs.

It is undecided whether Sarah Harvey and Bill Anderson are dancing together or not

Mary O'Reilly and Gary Mortimore give their interpretation of the "Twist."
